

Merle's Mission Ezine
 "The Best of the Net Straight to Your Door"
<http://www.MerlesWorld.com>

It was pretty nice out today. I took the dogs for a walk and I swear I saw Baxter smiling. He's sort of smug that way. Most days Gia doesn't want to walk and you end up dragging her most of the way down the street. She sort of bucks up like a mule and sometimes lays down on someone's lawn and refuses to get up. That's when I have to pick her up and carry her. I'm sure I look pretty comical to passer byers carrying one dog and walking two others. I mean who's in charge here anyway? <LOL> I'd love to have one of those dog strollers to push her around in but if people knew I had a dog in a stroller they'd probably want to have me committed. But I do think she'd enjoy the hell out of it. She's funny that way. I think she thinks she is a real live baby.

I was watching the news for just a few minutes the other day and couldn't believe the stories I was hearing. 10 minutes of your nightly news will have you thinking the world's gone crazy. Some of the things people do are insane. Does anyone else notice this as a growing trend?

I'm trying to find a home for a dog named Gizmo. He's 5 years old and a mix of a Toy Fox Terrier and a Boston Terrier. He's not fixed, but has all his shots. If you live close to Cleveland, OH and you want to give him a good home give me a shout. He's a good boy, loving and kind. His only crime is that his parents had a "real baby" and no longer have time for him. He's good with kids and other dogs. He weighs about 23lbs. He is a bit hyper but I think with proper attention and some time he'll calm down. Frankly I don't understand how someone can love a dog then have a baby and find the dog to be just an annoyance. As if it's a piece of furniture that you've grown tired of and want to discard. It's unfortunate that too many people take this stance when it comes to animals. They're a life long commitment and should be treated as any other household family member. They love you unconditionally and count on you for their every need. How cruel it is to not be there for them when they need you the most.

While I'm on my "soap box" I have to say another thing I'm really sick of are all of those political smearing commercials. Can one candidate only look good by making the other one look like crap? How juvenile. Reminds me of the games we use to play in High School. Stupid stuff and very negative. How do you feel good about yourself by making someone else look like an idiot? Again, these are just my observations but it does seem wrong.

Until next time. Merle out.

2- Quick Website Design - "Strong Tips on How to Get Started With Designing a Site"

By [http://ezinearticles.com/?expert=Sean_R_Mize

Designing a website is an activity that poses various similarities with how one designs a structure. It requires some amount of careful thinking and analysis of the many and multi dimensional aspects of the whole site design. Below are some of the tips and techniques that one can use in designing a site:

1. Lay down the whole purpose of the site. The objective of the site when known from the very start of the whole process will help the site designer to practically and easily determine the general concept of the entire site. These objectives will facilitate for the important areas of the site to be well highlighted and emphasized.

2. Create a blueprint of the whole design. You can start creating a chart of the major and minor components of the site detailing the several elements that will make up each segment of the website. You should also be able to show how these components are totally independent with another and possible how they impact one another.

3. Check on your graphical designs and virtual inclusions. Of course, we all know that a website should contain graphics and virtual illusions and effects. You have to make sure that these are properly blended with one another and that they do not overshadow one another.

4. Complement your whole design and graphics with the correct color combinations. The hue combination can severely impact your whole site design. So, to ensure that color blending will not be an issue, make sure that you include that on your design.

5. Equate everything with your site content. Make sure that you complement your content mood with the nature of the website design - color, graphics, pictures, and other aspects of multimedia. Just remember that what is important here is every element of the design should be working in parallel.

"Auction Ads- Another Simple Way to Earn Cash"

If you're using Google Adsense on your website to make some extra money you may have noticed your earnings substantially dropped off in the past 6 months. All part of the great Google secret I guess.

There are other ways to earn money by displaying ads on your site and one of them that's fairly new and getting a lot of publicity lately is
